Webmention is a web standard for mentions & conversations across the web, a powerful building block that is used for a growing federated network of rich interactions across the decentralized social web.

When you link to a site, you can send it a mention to notify it.
If it supports Webmentions, then that website may display your post as a comment, like, repost or other response.
Presto, you're having a conversation from one site to another!

Webmention is a way of saying which things linked or replied to other things. Constanze writes an article about a bill, Sascha replies with an article in his Microblog where Mario comments. All of them are notified about replies.
